The world's best SUP surfers took to the water and displayed their elite talent on the fourth day of competition on Denmark's northwest coast at the 2017 ISA World SUP and Paddleboard Championship.

Athletes hailing from the record-breaking 42 participating nations battled through challenging, onshore conditions in Vorupør, setting the stage for the SUP Surfing World Champions to be crowned on Thursday.

ISA President, Fernando Aguerre chimed in on the historic day of competition.

“The conditions were challenging today but the world's best SUP surfers showed why they are the best, able to perform at a high level no matter what the conditions are like. Tomorrow we'll see SUP Surfing World Champions crowned, the first ever in Europe.

“Vorupør has been amazing thus far. This is as remote and colorful of a town that you can find. The people, the culture, and the unity of the international athletes are creating an incredible atmosphere that can only be found at ISA World Championships.”
