Team France has continued their impressive performance at the ISA World Surfing Games and after six days of competition has held onto their lead that was built by the Women's Gold and Silver Medal performances of Pauline Ado and Johanne Defay earlier this week. France still holds onto in first place with all their male surfers remaining in the competition, followed by Japan, Brazil and Mexico, who also have all four of their men left.

The men's competition has set for a final showdown with a possible finish on Saturday if the expected increase in swell holds true. If not, then competition will wrap up on Sunday with the Semifinals and Finals.
